AMBITION.
A wee brown bird upon the bough;
A crimson cloudlet in the sky;
A longing in the fluttering breast
To see that cloud so far, so high.
A moment's doubling on the flight;
A thought of birdings in the nest;
A last regret, a pang—and then
An upward soaring to the West.
A dizzy faintness at the heart;
A struggling with fate's winds to cope;
A yearning, that will never cease,
To reach that bright bewildering hope.
A wild, glad joy; 'tis almost reached;
A vanishing of light and sound,
A leaden cloudlet in the sky;
A poor dead bird upon the ground.

March 10, 1873.

"Oh, how many a glorious record had the angels of me kept.
Had I done, instead of doubted, had I worried instead of wept."
True liberty consists in the privilege of enjoying our own rights—not in the destruction of the rights of others.

But to know how to say what other people only think, is what makes men poets and sages; and to dare to say what others only dare to think makes men martyrs, or reformers, or both.—Mrs. CHARLES.

Often times nothing but adversity will do for us. We need to be stripped of every earthly portion, that we may seek entirely our portion in Jehovah himself. We need to be turned out of a home on earth, that we may seek a home in heaven.—BONAN.

The successful men of this world are not those who go off at full gallop, but those who use racing phrases, those who "stay." It often happens that those whose early career is slower and gentler than that of others, exhibit a greater amount of mind, and tougher staying power, and come in at the winning post at last.—HUXLEY.

The lady in Millard's famous picture would have her lover's life from the massacre of Bartholomew by binding the popish badge around his arm; he kisses her for her love, but finally removes the badge. So when the dearest friends we have, out of mistaken tenderness, would persuade us to avoid persecution by relinquishing principle, and doing as others do, we should thank them for their love, but with unbending decision refuse to be numbered with the world.—SPURGEON.

After Dinner.

An Irish Trick.—Patrick O'Sic transit—that across the ocean.

A sealed proposal—the engagement kiss. A fig for your bill of fare—show me your bill of company.—SWIFT.

If seven days make one week, how many days will make one strong?

The Boston girls hold still till they're kissed, when they flare up all at once, and say: "I think you ought to be ashamed."

Why is a philanthropist like a well-trained horse?—because he always stops at the sound of vice.

It may sound like a paradox, yet the breaking of both wings of an army is a pretty sure way to make it fly.

When a clever fellow steals a kiss from a Louisiana girl, she smiles, blushes deeply, and says—nothing.

The mysterious name of the monkey-wrench was taken from its inventor, Mr. Monkey, who still lives in New Jersey.

The difference between October and November is that while with October the leaves fall, with November the Fall leaves.

Can a civil engineer inform us how it is that the mouths of rivers are larger than their heads?

What requires more philosophy than taking things as they come?—Parting with things as they go.

When a young chap steals a kiss from an Albany girl, she says: "I reckon it's my turn now," and gives him a box on the ear that he don't forget for a month.

A doctor went out for a day's sport, and complained of having killed nothing. "That's the consequence of having neglected your business," observed his wife.

When a wild spark attempts to kiss a Nantucket girl, she says: "Come, hear off, or I'll split your mainmast with a typhoon."

"Many do not appear to understand," remarks a writer, "that politeness requires a greater attention to the feelings of others than to mere forms."

An editor says that his ancestors have been in the habit of living a hundred years. His opponent responds by saying that that was before the introduction of capital punishment.

"James," said a young wife to her husband a few days after marriage, "you were honest enough to tell me that the chimney smoked, but why didn't you tell me that you smoked yourself?"

An industrious little miss of Pittsfield has discovered that two hundred and seventy words can be spelled from the word "abolished," and she thinks that, with the exercise of a little ingenuity, another hundred words might be easily manufactured.

A poet asks, "Where are the dead, the vanished dead, who trod the earth that we now tread?" If we were to make a random guess, we should say the most of them are buried—though this may not be the right answer to your riddle.

The following letter has been received from a friend, who requests an answer: "Will some of our young readers furnish the solution."

DEAR JIMMY: Since I came in the big boat to America, I have built me a house and a cellar for cider, and a great cellar it is. It is four square and as long as it is broad. It is 4 feet and 4-10ths of a foot deep, and it yielded me earth enough to make a bank all around it, ten feet high and ten feet thick. Next Fall I shall turn a stream of cider into it, which will fill it up to the top of the bank, brim-full, for cider is as plenty here as water is in an Irish canal. Now, dear Jimmy, only think how far it is across my cellar and how many gallons of cider I shall have, and you will very much oblige.

By his Att'y, J. C. O'HAPPENY.

Myer's Celebrated First Premium Plows

These plows have taken the First Premium at the American Institute plowing matches seven times. Received two silver cups and five silver medals.

The First Premium was awarded to these plows at the New Jersey State Fair and at all the Essex County Fairs.

Also, at two of the Essex County Exhibitions; and the ploughmen have taken the first premium with these plows at every trial.

I would call special attention to my No. 12 Plow which is superior to any other in this country for plowing purposes, but especially for turning stubble and coarse manure.

All kinds of repairing promptly done.
